Ald. Ellis drew the attention of the council to the fact that several of the old tanks used for fire protection had not been filled in, and may not be safe at the present time. The matter was referred to the public works committee.

It was suggested that the wages of the city's employees should be reduced, and this question was referred to the finance committee to investigate and make a recommendation.

Prices of water meters are being obtained.

Canada's Farthest West

Clayoquot Sound, one of the delightful spots of the West Coast, Vancouver Island. It seems hardly possible in these days of quick and easy travel, of competitive transportation, that there should be a coast on Vancouver Island, with a seaboard of over 40 miles that is practically unknown. And this is a temperate country between the latitude of 46 deg. and 55 deg. The Canadian Pacific is the only line to send boats to play up and down this coast and they only call at the different ports every ten days or so. Otherwise these pioneer settlers have no connection with the outside world unless it be at the end of the Alberni Canal which is so far the only point where the island railway meets the west coast.
The west coast is more temperate than the east; the average temperature for January last year up Quatsino Sound was 36 deg. Fahr. for August and 58 deg. Fahr. for January.

The two industries that keep the west coast alive at all are fishing and logging, and all the big salmon-canning companies of British Columbia have their plants here. The first port of call is Port Renfrew, at the mouth of the San Juan River, and the Pacific Packing Co. of Vancouver put up 2,000 cases of salmon a day in the seasons. Farther east, past the Carmanah Light to Clatskanie, a great city with a population of about sixty white and forty Indians, where the Nitinat Cannery turned out over 55,000 cases in 1917.

Away back inland from these ports towers the great line of mountains that stretch the whole length of the island, and just here form the watershed of these three wide rivers, the San Juan, the Skeena and the Nitinat. These are those who say—but whisper it low—that a hand of oil, known to law and seen by fever, still have their range on the slopes of this watershed, and yet another hand in the far northern east corner of the island between the head of Kootenay Sound and the south-east arm of Quatsino, round about the headwaters of the Nimp-

FARM HANDS TO GOVERNMENT COULD NOT CONSIDER PLAN FROST INSURANCE

The summer sale of wages for farm help will go into effect April 1. Men have been given work for the past two years at a prevailing rate of 35¢ per month, with board, but this will be raised to 50¢ per month for the spring and summer months. Special cases are likely to be arranged for at either more or less, but the general wage will be fixed on that basis, which is considerably below the summer rate last year.
W. G. Peterson, superintendent of the government employment bureau, points out that the rate of wages is not determined or controlled in any way by the employment department, which undertakes only to place men where wanted at whatever may be the going rates. It was stated at the recent employment service conference in Regina, which Mr. Peterson attended, that the farmers throughout the west were proposing to offer a 50¢ rate, and that will therefore be the wage to be quoted through the various bureaus of the department.
"It is altogether a question of supply and demand," says Mr. Peterson. "The farmers have told us they cannot afford to pay the high prices for labor which were in force last year, which in some cases went to 80¢ and even 100¢ per month. Just what the coming season will bring forth, however, it is not possible now to say. So far there is no surplus of available farm help, but we are expecting that there will be a great many men offering in as soon as the weather opens up and the spring work really begins."

Edmonton, March 19.—Nine hundred tons of freight for the far north is at present lying on the bank at the end of the street on the McMurtry line, says R. A. Brooks, field expert of the Port Norman Oil and Refining company, who has just returned from Lac la Piche. Forty tons per day have been moved from the end of the street to McMurtry, the last snowfall being of great assistance in the freight operations.

HAD RHEUMATISM FOR FIVE YEARS

No Return of the Trouble Since Taking
"FRUIT-A-TIVES"

MR. JOHN E. GULDERSON
P.O. Box 123, Parkhurst, N.S.

"I suffered with Rheumatism for five years, having it so badly at times I was unable to get up without assistance. I tried different medicines I saw advertised and was treated by doctors in Amherst, also in my home town, but the Rheumatism came back.

In 1910, I saw in an advertisement that 'Fruit-a-tives' would stop Rheumatism, and took one box and got relief; then I took three more for about six months and the Rheumatism was all gone and I have never felt it since.

Anyone who would care to write me as regards 'Fruit-a-tives' I would be glad to tell them what 'Fruit-a-tives' did for me.

The Cowhide Boots Money Couldn't Buy

I heard the sound of heavy boots upon the entry door and looking up from my work, expecting to see some farmer or lumberman, I was decidedly surprised when I beheld standing at the schoolroom door a youth of perhaps fifteen years.

"My name is Adam Tufts, and I want to get some schooling," declared the stranger, the while awkwardly fumbling his cap.

I told him where to hang his cap, and a moment later the way to a seat which he was to occupy for the present at least. There was not a little staring as he blundered after me. A very heavy and decidedly large pair of cowhide boots occupied for the moment and also for the noisy "clump-clump-clump" across the floor.

Adam was dubbed "Boots" at recess half an hour later and the nickname clung to him for nearly a month, until, well, he proved his sterling worth.

Little by little I learned something of his history, partly from others, partly from him. He lived with his grandfather, a matter of three miles or so from the schoolhouse. There the two eked out a scant living on a small farm. I learned that it was an odd ball matter for them to make a code meat, and that it was only through practicing the most rigid economy that they managed to exist. Adam's remarks as to top boots were not evidence of this economy, for the grandfather had home-killed a cowhide, and worked up a portion of the leather into two pairs of boots, one for himself and one for his grandson.

I think the size of the pair worn by Adam was about a number twelve or thirteen; certainly they were simply enormous. It was really not to be wondered at that so quickly had Adam been nicknamed "Boots."

Adam turned out to be rather a slow student, but he was very persistent, and as a result of his dogged perseverance he managed to keep along with his class. In fact he worked his way past several pupils whose opportunities he far exceeded his own.

The fall passed, and then came one of the hardest winters ever experienced in that section of New Brunswick. There was snow on the ground for nearly a month before Thanksgiving, and for five months thereafter there was little respite of winter. Finally came the "big blizzard," a snowstorm of such tremendous violence that the oldest inhabitants could not remember its equal.

"That memorable day I remember well indeed, although more than thirty years have passed since then. Intensely cold it was that morning the wind was out of the northeast and blew a half-gale, the sky was overcast when school opened.

"Guess it wouldn't be a bad idea, teacher, to keep an extra hot fire in the stove today," remarked Adam Tufts, a few minutes before nine o'clock. "I figure there's going to be snow in lots of it afore long. Suppose I go rounder round after some more wood; there ain't none too much out in the shed."

I agreed that such a course would be advisable, and a moment or two later he was off to the adjoining woods accompanied by one of the larger boys. He had been gone less than ten minutes when snow began to fall in fine flakes, which sifted in under the cracks around the windows. In less than fifteen minutes the storm was so thick that it was impossible to see a hundred feet distant. In a little while Adam and the one who had accompanied him returned, bearing deep snow on their shoulders. They too were so exhausted that for a few moments neither could speak.

"Just 'best all we could do to clear this weather," declared Adam, at length, getting his breath. "I 'most with there was none of us here today. It's going to be hard for some of the youngsters to get home."

I was of the same opinion myself, but the less in class general get frightened, I said that I hoped the storm would ease up before noon.

But the storm did not abate in the least. In fact it increased in violence as the morning advanced. I found myself wondering that fathers and grown-up sons did not drive to the schoolhouse after the children. Later I learned that several did attempt the trip, but were unable to force their horses through the storm. No less than three horses perished beside the road that morning while being urged on toward the schoolhouse.

One crotch broke the supply of firewood about exhausted. Matters were certainly getting serious. Finally Adam strode across the floor and came to my desk. It seems as though I can see him now. Determination was writ large in his face.

"Teacher," he whispered, "somebody has got to be done, and I'm going to do it!"

"It is getting cold here," I admitted.

"Yes, sir, it'll be a good deal colder pretty soon," he replied. "We've got to get out of here."

"This children will get lost in the blizzard," I objected, "I can't burn the chairs and desks."

"No, they won't get lost," answered Adam. "Will you trust 'em to my? I hardly know what reply to make. I'm sure I can make out to get to Buck Tufts's leggin' camp," but he continued.

"That ain't but 'bout an eighth of a mile from here. If we can, we'll manage to get all the boys and girls here in short order. Once we get there, teacher, we'll find plenty of wood and a big salmester stove. Whereby that big ball of string you had 'bout a time a-kin' up the 'lectations'."

"It is here in my desk," I replied, "but I don't understand. What do you want to do?"

"Just go on to find my way back again after I make the camp," he answered. "I'm going to tie one end to the knob of the door here in my desk, and the other end to the knob of the door there in the salmester stove. The storm is so thick, but I'm going to try it."

Reluctantly I handed the ball of string, which he had tied to the knob of the door, to him. He took it, and he was gone.

"Don't you worry, teacher, 'cause I'll be back pretty quick," he said, looking back over his shoulder. "This is where those pig pots of mine'll work in handy. They ain't very stylish, but they're nice and warm."

A cold shiver ran down my spine. His overcoat collar turned up, his cap pulled down over his ears, he started away, the while waiting until the ball of white string, the end of which he had tied to the doorknob, he saw that less than thirty steps when he was lost to sight.

It was nearly an hour before he returned. Suddenly he came in with a look that was fifty feet from the schoolhouse.

"Well, just 'bout as straight as a crow flies," he exclaimed after getting his breath. "I didn't see but half the string. Soon as I got my wind I started getting the boys and girls over there. I put 'bout 'bout ten of the biggest boys to string along twice over. The first I didn't want to make a slip, teacher, and have one of the little ones slip. We'll pass 'em along from 'bout to 'bout until we get 'em there."

Instantly the situation cleared. I saw the urgency of his plan and hastened to further it. Singling out ten of the bigger boys, they were instructed as 'thoroughly as possible, and Adam started with them in a body. Each had hold of the string, and every hundred feet or so Adam had a set of their halt, instructing him to stand fast awaiting further orders. Thus he posted the boys about a hundred feet apart between the schoolhouse and the lumberman's camp. Twenty minutes from the time he left the schoolhouse with the boys, he was back again, a look of triumph in his eyes.

"They were twenty boys and girls in my class. They were all in my hands and follow him, he taking the lead, and he had grasping that of the foreman of the group. With the other end of the string, which he had tied to the knob of the door, he was able to slip through his fingers. One by one we came to the boys who were posted along the route and each was pushed up in turn, each taking the little piece of string of struggling children. Half way to the camp the string parted, and so on, probably grasping it too tightly."

"It was Adam's voice, loud and clear."

"Hello!"

It was the answer of the next outpost.

"Then we went on. Adam shouting from time to time, and the next outpost answering.

Finally we were there, more dead than alive it seemed. There a most welcome surprise was in store for us—a roaring fire which Adam had started while he first reached camp. Here we stopped all that day and all night. Hungry we all were, to be sure, but warm, and glad in our hearts to know we were safe.

Early the next morning, the storm having passed, Adam started for the village with some of the larger boys. Two hours later a number of sleighs and puns reached the lumberman's camp, and very shortly all of us returned to our various homes.

The nickname "Boots" was a thing of the past from that memorable day. Until school closed for the summer vacation Adam closed that remarkable pair of homemade boots, but no word was dropped by pupil, young or old, relative to them.

It seems as though I can now hear the children calling to him—'Abe! Abe!'

It was nearly twenty years before I saw Adam Tufts again after the closing of school that year. Thus of a spring day I chanced to pass that way again. Saw him in a general store.

There he had a long talk with him. I learned that he was the proprietor of the store, and postmaster as well. He was married and had a family of boys and girls. He lived over the store. Describing himself for a moment, he boasted upstairs, returning very shortly with a wooden box under his arm. Opening it, he brought to my sight an enormous pair of cowhide boots.

"Money couldn't buy those boots," he said, a far-away look coming into his eyes. "You'll recall them," he added, smiling, pointing about the corner of his mouth.

I nodded in the affirmative.

"Those are the first boots I ever owned," he said, chucking up a bit. "Grandfather made them. I was proud of them until—well, I guess the shoe was forgotten after a time."

A cold shiver ran down my spine. He said, looking back over his shoulder. "This is where those pig pots of mine'll work in handy. They ain't very stylish, but they're nice and warm."

We looked into each other's eyes, and the trip on our hands tightened.

COMMUNICATION

(We do not necessarily endorse the sentiments expressed in this or any other communication under this heading.—Ed.)

To the Editor,
Wetaskiwin Times,
Wetaskiwin, Alta.

Dear Sir,

I wish to express my views and experience on what I consider one of the most valuable productions in this part of Alberta, namely, red clover.

In the first place, in the spring of 1905 we moved west from Wetaskiwin, settling on the north shore of Little Lake, taking two bales of timothy and red clover hay, the same being shipped here in an immediate car from Iowa, U.S.A., and we felt the hay to a team of oxen in the brush where we homesteaded, and later in the spring cleared and broke some land for our pasture. The following year we had some stools of red clover in the garden. We gave it little thought at the time, and for several years we played and worked in our garden. Red clover continued to grow and spread, and later we put out gooseberries, currants, and the clover spread and grew rank enough to make at the rate of two tons of hay per acre. It seeded very heavily, so we saved some of the seed and have been growing it continuously ever since. I have had it grow to the height of five feet. As most farmers know, when it gets two or three feet high, it spreads and unless you have time to hold it up, it falls or spreads so it is difficult to harvest.

I have seen clover grow in Iowa, Illinois, Missouri and other clover states, but I never saw a ranker growth than here in Alberta. It is my opinion that a clay soil is preferable to a heavy loam for clover. Where we started it there was a growth of wild vine and vetch, and the clover grew well without incultivation, but I think in most cases it is preferable to inoculate land where you seed to clover, by sowing or scattering dried clover from land where clover is growing or good commercial inoculation.

I have experimented with alfalfa on the same kind of land without success. It grew and did not winter kill, but grew very weak and spindling; in fact, it would not make one-fourth as much hay as the clover, and as nearly all farmers know, there is no crop as good as clover for selling purposes and none better for cow feed than red clover.

Clover puts land in the best possible condition for growing potatoes, vegetables and all grains, and it is really strange to me that there is so little interest taken in growing this crop. It is my opinion that in ten years from now clover will be a common crop (at least) on all clay soil farms in this part of Alberta, and these farms will increase in value in proportion to the acreage of clover grown.

I am aware that there are some who are skeptical about growing clover, but there are hundreds of people who have seen the crop grow and will verify the fact as to the successful growing of clover.

DID THE FARMER WIN OR LOSE?

The capitalist's story is that of a Manitoba farmer who shipped some sheepskins to a commission firm in Winnipeg. When the skins were sold and the express and cartage paid, the farmer owed the firm $1.65, for which the firm billed him. The farmer had a good head, however, and wrote back that he had no money but would send some more sheepskins.

The United Farmers of Alberta Political Association has been incorporated.

PIMPLES AND BLOTCHES
ALL OVER HER FACE.

Pimples, blotches and all other skin troubles caused by the blood being in an impure condition. These little irritating sores, appear on the forehead, on the nose, on the chin, and on other parts of the body, and although they are a dangerous thing, they are very unsightly.

There is only one way to get rid of them, and that is by purifying the blood of its impurities.

Burdock Blood Purifier is without a doubt the best remedy for this purpose. This valuable medicine has been on the market for the past 45 years and its reputation is such that you are not experiencing with any new and untried remedy.

Miss Margarette Bright, 61 Main Ave., Halifax, N.S., writes: "I have suffered very much, during the last two years, from pimples and blotches, having them all over my face. I tried different remedies without any relief. I was advised to try Burdock Blood Purifier, which I did, and after taking just two bottles I have been, as I believe, permanently relieved. I can highly recommend Burdock Blood Purifier."

B.B.P. is put up only by The T. Millburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

MILLET

A very enjoyable farewell party was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Carter on Saturday evening last, when all their friends and neighbors met to say an revoir to Mr. and Mrs. Carter, who are shortly leaving for their new home at St. Paul de Mettis. Cards and games were indulged in till eleven o'clock, when a dainty supper was served. A very handsome clock is being purchased, and this will be presented to Mr. and Mrs. Carter as a token of esteem from all their friends and neighbors.

Harold Mann was in Millet for the week-end.

The agricultural society masquerade ball was a great success. The costumes were excellent. Mrs. Currie taking first prize as an Irish Colleen. A very elaborate costume it was. Metcalfe received the gentleman's prize, costume "Paddy." Prizes were also given for the best waiters.

The agricultural society, West Liberty division, are giving a concert on Wednesday, March 30, at the West Liberty school. Eric Milton and Sammy Mantel have the program in hand. This means that it will certainly be a worth seeing. Supper will be served. The Philomaclean society are giving a social dance at the West Liberty school house on Monday, March 28th.

John Smith is leaving shortly for Peace River, and has sold his farm. George Parriett is the purchaser. Geo. moves on in a few days. Jack Smith is disposing of his stock and farm implements April 6th. Coal Lake baseball club are giving a baseball social and concert at the hall on Tuesday, March 29th.

OBITUARY

One of the oldest of Millet's pioneers, in the person of Thomas Cummings of Milburn, passed away on March 14th, from a fatal attack of pneumonia and heart failure, at the ripe age of 71 years, in his home, and many friends and relatives that gathered round him to wish him the last farewell. Mr. T. Cummings was born in the State of Missouri, and came to Canada, settling in the Bonnie Glen district some fifteen years ago, where by dint of hard labor and careful management he secured a very comfortable home, and made many valuable improvements on his large tract of land, homesteaded and purchased.

There are left behind to mourn his loss, a beloved wife and seven children, five sons and two daughters; a sixth son having died five years ago. These present were: Ben Cummings and Thelma, who live at home; C. W. of Edmonton; Charles A. of Cadogan; and the two sisters, Mrs. D. Peters of Rocky Mountain House, and Mrs. Van Carter of Edmonton. Mr. Van Carter and daughter Alta, besides Mr. and Mrs. E. Carter, all of Edmonton, were also present. Mr. Frank Cummings of Iowa, U.S.A. was unable to be present.

A very impressive memorial service was conducted by Rev. I. N. Hughes, assisted by Evangelist Joseph Robinson of Toronto, recently from Belfast, Ireland.

A large cortege of friends from the immediate and surrounding territory, gathered to pay loving and sympathetic tribute to one who had endeared himself to all. He was a member of the Methodist church for years, and endeavored to live a consistent Christian life—"faithful to death."

The remains were tenderly laid to rest in the Wetaskiwin cemetery, where numbers of city friends paid tribute to one whom they had long treasured their highest esteem as an upright, honest, God-fearing man and a true local citizen.

MILLET CHURCH NOTES

The Epworth League of the Y.P.S. will hold an Easter pie social in the Methodist church on Monday, March 28. A program will be given. This will be the young people's contribution to the church budget as an Easter offering. A cordial invitation is extended to all. If you are missed by the special invitation, come anyway and enjoy with us a real happy time. A small admission fee of the only.

Rev. A. L. Robinson, Presbyterian minister of faith, will exchange pulpits with the pastor on Sunday, April 10. Second of April 2, as first announced, was chosen for convenient trade, and to the anniversary of our benevolent and educational funds of the church.

Special services

The revival services, which closed at St. Paul's Methodist church last Friday night, have proved a potential factor in deepening the spiritual life of the people, and pastor, Rev. Robinson has a warm message, powerful, positive and persuasive. His theology, unadorned by any new-thought, hairsplitting doctrines, rings with the true and triumphant note of the gospel's plan of salvation. The converts gained and the re-consecrated lives will bear eloquent testimony to his outstanding reputation as a self-sustaining evangelist. It is this sort of fearless and earnest

Holy-Spirit-filled men that we need in our ministry, and as Bro. Robinson goes east to the Toronto conference, it is to be hoped that his desire will be granted, namely, to be ordained into the ranks of the Methodist ministry. The pastor and congregation wish him God-speed in his great calling.

MILLET SUNDAY SERVICES

I. N. Hughes, Pastor.

JESSE ALEXANDER CLARKE

Jesse Alexander, infant son (13 days) of Mr. and Mrs. Asa Clarke, died on Sunday, March 20. A brief but impressive service was held at the home, near the Port Bello school on Tuesday at 12 a.m., at which many of the neighbors gathered, among them were Mr. and Miss Morrison of Norridge, Alta; father and sister of Mrs. Clarke. The remains were interred in Millet cemetery, Rev. I. N. Hughes officiating.

WAGNER—CURRIE

A very quiet wedding was solemnized on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, when one of our esteemed and popular flower citizens, Gus A. Wagner, was united in marriage to Mrs. A. Currie of Banbridge, County Down, Ireland.

The ceremony was performed at the residence of immediate relatives fully. Rev. I. N. Hughes officiated. The heartiest congratulations are extended to the happy couple, and we wish them a long and happy life.

APPRECIATION

Mr. Ed. Johnson desires through the columns of The Times, to express his appreciation to the fire brigade for the quick response to the alarm sent work in quickly extinguishing the fire. He is also grateful to the neighbors for the fire at his home on Saturday evening, and for the efficient and friendly assistance.

FLAMING COMET
MAY HIT EARTH

Next June, if the calculations of an eminent British astronomer are correct, this old earth is going to experience a demonstration of fireworks that will make the late display war seem like a twenty-fourth of May in a village, says an eastern writer.

The comet is now racing at awful speed towards the earth.

Dr. A. C. D. Crommelin, of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, England, states that if this comet does not actually bump into the earth, it is going to come so close that the most marvellous pyrotechnic display in the history of man will result.

June 26 next he sets as the decisive date. About that day the large comet, Pons-Winnecke, travelling at the rate of three hundred miles a second (from here to Calgary and back) will either have bumped into the earth or have swept by it in a stupendous rush of flaming gases, molten matter, rock, meteorites and dust.

Professor C. A. Chant, professor of astronomy at the University of Toronto, Ontario, does not deny Dr. Crommelin's statement. Prof. Chant says that Dr. Crommelin is a very eminent astronomer, with one of the greatest observatories in the world in which to make his calculations.

Pons-Winnecke is one of twenty comets that run from the sun to Jupiter. It makes the round trip once every five and three-quarter years.

While our old earth ambles leisurely around the sun once a year at the rate of only eighteen miles a second, Pons-Winnecke rushes around its route from the sun to Jupiter at the rate of about 300 miles a second.

The "flaming comet" at intervals is irregular to the earth's calm passage. It cuts across the earth's orbit at a different place each trip.

This trip, says Dr. Crommelin, the comet is going to pass so close, the two orbits are going to intersect so nearly, that it will be up and back whether they pass each other or have a collision.

Pons-Winnecke, with a flaming head and a huge fiery tail, will become visible to astronomers some time this month. From then on, according to Dr. Crommelin, it will rapidly increase in visibility, until before June it will be clearly visible to the naked eye. By which time our astronomers will have had time to get their bearings and to warn us whether we ought to take out life insurance, dig deep dugouts under our cellars or simply get ready for the worst.

Professor Chant says that there is a difference of fifteen degrees between the planes of the earth's and this comet's orbits. This comet is subject to deviation in its course because of the "pull" of Jupiter and other planets. Very bodies, and until Pons-Winnecke comes into view, we cannot observe it as made on its course. It cannot be definitely determined how close the two bodies will come. But Professor Chant assures us that we will have plenty of warning.

By June next such differences of opinion as to the terms to Germany, the question of disarmament, will therefore be of little account. Prohibition and other social reforms will be easily enforced. War protesters will anxiously be distributing their gains. Capital will probably be making the most radical overtures to labor. For, according to the astronomer, about that time the sky will be filled with a vast livid monster with a flaming tail behind it that will scare virtue into all mankind.

How big it will be depends on how close it passes to us. What the dimensions of Pons-Winnecke are is supposed to be composed of the finest material, flaming gases with perhaps a core of molten solid in the head; the tail, thousands of miles long, being composed of gases trailing behind and bits of disintegrated solid matter, rocks, metal, dust, that have broken free of the head of the comet and are pulled along after it in its mad, eternal rush through space.

SPRING SHOW AT EDMONTON

The Edmonton Spring Show, which always attracts many visitors from Wetaskiwin, is set this year for April 11th to 15th. The bull sale will commence April 12th, and the horse sale is slated for April 15th. Entries for these events include stock from some of the best breeders in Alberta, and the catalogue is now being distributed for these sales. Those who contemplate buying new stock to better their herds should write for a catalogue to Manager W. J. Stark of Edmonton. The show entries close on March 25th, for the horse, fat cattle and children's competition classes. We understand some choice entries for the Calf Feeding Competition are being fitted in this locality. Information regarding railway rates may be secured from the local ticket agent.

ALBERTA TAKES RED RIBBON AT BRANDON

Brandon, Mar. 17.—Carrying off some of the highest honors, the university of Alberta made notable wins at the Manitoba Winter Fair and Pal Stock Show, which opened here this morning. In the class for five steers over 1,100 pounds there were originally five entries but three withdrew, which left the field to the university of Alberta exhibit. The Alberta Herd was won on first and second award.

Donald Rutherford had a difficult time placing the ribbons in the competition between the group of three Aberdeen Angus steers owned by J. D. McGregor, Brandon, and two groups of Herefords from Alberta university. In the class for three steers, three years and under, or heifers calved in 1920. The university drew first and third, J. D. McGregor second, and James Turner, Carroll, Man., fourth. There were ten entries.

In the last class of cattle judged before noon today, the red ribbon was awarded the university of Alberta for its pair of Herefords, J. D. McGregor came second and the university also secured a third.

LIQUOR PLEBISCITE IS FAVORED BY THE
CABINET AND LIB-ERAL MEMBERS

A provincial plebiscite to allow the people of Alberta to say whether they wish direct and full government control of the liquor traffic, or further restrictive legislation to limit the "bone dry" will be submitted to a vote in Alberta late next summer or early in the fall.

At the caucus of the government private members with the cabinet ministers Wednesday night, this policy was briefly discussed and met with the individual approbation of a large majority of the members present.

No vote or definite action on the plan, however, was taken for the reason that the major part of the time of the caucus was put in discussing the subject of aid to irrigation projects. It was nearly midnight when the caucus, having settled the irrigation question, took up the subject of possible government control of the sale of liquor along the lines of the British Columbia plan. Because of the physical condition of Premier Charles Stewart, following his recent operation for appendicitis, the members felt it was unfair to detain him longer at the caucus and the meeting adjourned, to be summoned again in a few days.—Edmonton Journal.

HEART AND NERVES
BOTHERED HER.
Housework Played Her Out.

Three years ago my heart and nerves began to bother me. I could not do my housework without being almost completely played up. After securing a small room I would have to sit down and rest, and would feel as if I could not get on my feet.

Every few nights I would have heart attacks, such as the well known "I was jumping, a ball of water, or the children, or my husband falling in, and I could get no rest, as I would be awake some time after. I went to my doctor, and he told me it was my nerves, and they had been affected by a nervous illness. He gave me some medicine, but as soon as it was over I was as bad as ever again. I got half a dozen boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and they helped me so much I got more, and can truly say I have no lack of health now, and don't feel so tired after a good days work, as I did before after sweeping the small room, and have had none of those horrid dreams for months and months.

FAMOUS VIOLINIST FOR SCHOOL CONCERT

Wetaskiwin high school is especially favored in being able to announce in connection with its concert program on April 4th, the appearance of Prof. Darimont, violinist, of Edmonton. Recently Professor Darimont has been making weekly visits to Wetaskiwin for the benefit of local students of the violin and by a fortunate coincidence the high school concert falls on the date of one of these visits, thus making it possible to secure this exceptional talent for the local concert.

Those who have heard Professor Darimont in the past need no further inducement to avail themselves of another opportunity of hearing him. To those who have not heard him, some conception of his rank as a violinist may be gained from the fact that he was a gold medalist at the Conservatory of Brussels in the year 1904. This means not merely that he was the best of the students of his day, as the gold medal is not an annual prize awarded to the leading violinist of the class but a special prize, the awarding of which is reserved for occasions when a student has displayed rare talent. The talent of this artist is such that he was considered worthy to occupy for a number of years the position of leading first violin in an orchestra conducted by the world-famous Ysaïe. Madame Darimont, also a distinguished musician, will act as accompanist. As tickets were already on sale when the services of Professor and Madame Darimont were secured, no change in the price of admission will be made. The high school orchestra, under the able leadership of Parker Walverton, is practicing regularly and will contribute its usual share to the success of the concert.

The plan of seats will open at Rouse Brothers' hardware store on Saturday, March 28th, and ticket holders are advised to make their reservations, as tickets are selling rapidly and a crowded house is expected.

WETASKIWIN MEMBER CHALLENGED BY JAS. WEIR

The legislature started out the week Monday afternoon by dividing itself over a decision of Speaker Phipps, an event novel and interesting enough in itself, but not necessarily indicative that the house was yet in the mood for a genuine vote to remove the budget division which has been dragging its course through the chamber for days and nights past.

Mr. Speaker's ruling was challenged by James Weir, Nanton, who took exception to a reference of H. J. Montgomery, Wetaskiwin, that the Non-Partisan League had a connection with the United Farmers organization, and demanded a retraction from Mr. Montgomery for a reflection on the Alberta organization and the two non-partisan members of the house (himself and Mrs. McKinney).

Mr. Montgomery said he was quite prepared to accept the explanation of Mr. Weir and stand corrected, which the speaker decided was sufficient, but Mr. Weir demanded a full retraction and appealed the ruling of the chair. The appeal was lost by a vote of 32 to 10. Mr. Montgomery said he had finished, the member for Nanton took the floor in the debate and briefly but warmly defended the Non-Partisan organization of Alberta in a short review of its career, asserting that the "machine" and partisan methods of the two old parties were to blame for the organization which had no connection with that of Dakota. He departed with Mr. Montgomery that the "propaganda and movement" were dying out, citing the "independent" changes in the legislature itself as an indication that the non-partisan barn was a good one to get under.

The number for Wetaskiwin in an able address advocated municipal school boards, more efficient teachers in the rural schools, local control of school land sales, and amongst other matters, in the strongest terms urged the government to complete the Lacombe and Northwestern Railway from Rimbey to Edmonton, referring to the rich territory to be traversed west of Wetaskiwin and Leduc.

Mr. Montgomery also attacked the present system of executive government employment offices, making a plea for the return of private agencies. — Edmonton Bulletin.

WHAT CALGARY THINKS OF THE CALGARY KIDDIES

A Calgary paper has the following to say of the part played by the Calgary Kiddies at a real Irish concert under the auspices of the Irish Glee Club, on the evening of St. Patrick's Day, in the Al Azhar Temple, Calgary: Perhaps one of the most popular numbers of the program was "A Little Bit of Irish," a song and dance revue by the children of the McDonald academy. Calgary may be justly proud of the juvenile talent presented by the young artists in this number. They went through a series of Irish dances, character songs and recitations in a manner beyond criticism. Becoming and attractive costumes added to the attractiveness of the act. Those taking part were: Beth and Molly Lockhart, Rose Jackson, Meriel Thom, Georgina Playfair, Kathleen Kilbuck, Winona Scott, Geraldine Smith, Marguerite Nolan, Margaret Harvey and Frederick Colborne.

The Calgary Kiddies are coming to the Wilson theatre, Wetaskiwin, on Friday, April 1st.
